Jewish law

(Version 1)

Note: For construction of this schedule, two existing classifications were utilized:

(1) For the initial part, KBM1-523, the number range BM1-523 of Class BM: Judaism, has been applied parallel without changes, but in brackets, indicating that in KBM, these numbers are not active. This parallel classification, correlating content and number structure between the older schedule BM and the new schedule KBM as close as possible, aided by extensive references, was employed here primarily to provide a vehicle for local collection decisions in distribution of large sets of historic materials as well as present day treatises between the two classes BM and KBM. This technique was tested in the most recent classification developments for careful recovery of materials from an older class (to which they were referred to by past practice) without disrupting the collection. Red type indicates new developments and notes not consistent with BM, or BM/KBM interfiled.

(2) The 5000 number Table D, developed for civil law jurisdictions contained in the regional classification schedule KL-KWX: Law of Asia, Africa and Pacific Area as the pattern and number base for the subject arrangement of KBM. The approximate patterning, or rather complete parallel arrangements of subjects, was essential in order to allow for navigation of information from one class into the hierarchy of the other class ("interfiling")

- * in pre-coordinated (matching) numerical order, and

- * under harmonized terminology where topics are rooted in, or related to, the same concept, but differ in ethno-cultural provenance.

Presentation of the captions

Although LC's collections on religion and religious law are polyglott, the terminology in the captions is represented in English and romanized (LC convention) Hebrew. To aid in retrieval of materials, all pertinent LCSH's were added to the caption.

Typography

The schedule is written in regular type whether or not BM or Table D number arrangements are used.
